

Third Party Reporting Centres – Isle of Wight

A Third Party Reporting Centre is a place (which is not a police station) where victims can report hate crime and incidents. The report can be given in confidence and the details of the report will only contain the victim’s personal details with their consent when passed to the police. The benefits of setting up a third-party centre include:

- Victims will gain support and confidence
- Victims don’t need to give their personal details
- Victims can be signposted to ongoing support
